

Camille Hawkins, MSW, LCSW

Hi there, I'm Camille. I understand that infertility can affect every aspect of life and is often the most stressful experience a woman goes through during her lifetime. With something as personal and stressful as struggling to build a family, navigating fertility treatments, or waiting to adopt, it can be helpful to feel heard and validated by someone who understands these complicated worlds. As a licensed therapist, I am passionate about helping individuals and couples manage the aspects of their lives that are affected by the strain of infertility and childlessness. I assist individuals and couples with navigating the complex worlds of infertility, third party reproduction, and adoption.

I am a Licensed Clinical Social Worker with a masters degree in social work from the University of Utah and a bachelor's degree in Social Work from Utah State. I have experience working as a crisis worker for Intermountain Healthcare, helping families who lost their babies to miscarriage and stillbirth, helping families adjust to having a baby in the NICU, and facilitating adoptions. As a therapist at the Family Support Center, my major focus was on helping families adjust to difficult experiences and navigating their relationships along the way.

I have level 2 training from the Gottman Institute for Couples Therapy and am passionate about helping couples navigate stressful life transitions such as infertility and adoption. I also have training from the State of Utah in Trauma-Focused Cognitive Behavioral Therapy and have experience working with trauma victims, particularly of sexual abuse. I am a member of the Mental Health Practitioners Group of the American Society of Reproductive Medicine where I receive ongoing training for helping those struggling with infertility and family building.

I began working in the field of infertility after the resolution of my own journey to parenthood. After many failed infertility treatments, I became a mom through adoption. In my spare time, I enjoy being with my husband, two daughters, and two fur babies. I would love to get to know you and help you on your journey. Contact me directly at camille@uirc.info or fill out an appointment request and let's make a plan to help you meet your goals!